2. In communities, reflect on the following ideas:
   a) What is one of the most worrying problems within the school community?
   b) How has this problem affected life at school?
   c) How does this problem affect you as a part of the community?
   d) In what ways does this problem manifest itself in your family and community?
   e) Do you remember a specific case that represents this problem? Which one?

Iara Wanda Gjinovich. ESTADO DE MÉXICO

3. In your notebook or on white sheets of paper, write a story (narrative genre) based on the problem you spoke about and reflected on.
   a) Write it in the third person.
   b) Before starting, see the following example:

Problem: Drug Addiction

All schools and communities face significant social problems that are often overlooked. One reason is that certain practices that are harmful to everyone, especially the most vulnerable individuals, are considered "normal" or "unavoidable."

4. Individually, but keeping in mind that you are part of a community, choose the problem that interests you most and that has made an impact on your community. Then, search in documentary or digital sources for the causes, some of the consequences, and how it has been addressed by public or private institutions.

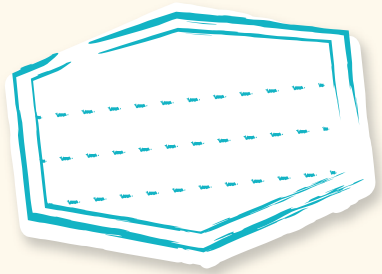

Retrieval

1. In community, explore the development of dramatic texts by searching the following concepts and providing examples from a text you choose to analyze.

Protagonist	Plot	Conflict	Theme
Antagonist	Set design	Act	Scene
Characters	Props	Dialogue	Monologue

3ERO_SEC_INGLES_P-001-184.indb 118 26/07/24 18:52

a) Use reliable sources such as the following:
- Book Colección Nanahuatzin. Múltiples lenguajes. Tercer grado
- Book Colección Nanahuatzin. Lenguajes. Tercer grado
- The School Library or the community library
- Digital sources (internet)

2. Analyze the first act of a play and find out how the previously analyzed concepts are presented. You can read one of the following:
   a) Las paredes oyen by Juan Ruiz de Alarcón
   b) Don Juan Tenorio by José Zorrilla
   c) Los empeños de una casa by Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz
   d) A Midsummer Night's Dream by William Shakespeare

3. Copy the following table in your notebook and fill it out with the information you gathered during the analysis of the text you chose.

Title of the play Act I
Argument	Theme	Conflict
Scene	Monologue	Dialogue
Character	Protagonist	Antagonist
Set design	Props

Broadcasting

1. In community, organize the order in which each play will be performed.
2. One or two students may help your teacher welcome the attendees and introduce each play.
3. Consider distributing a sheet of paper or notebook for comments to the audience at the end of each play.
4. In assembly, share the search you conducted on the problem.
5. Discuss the options available to address such a problem and identify some institutions or strategies that can be useful for this purpose.

Grammar

Individually, read the following lines from monologues carefully. Then rewrite each, transforming the direct speech into reported speech.

a) "I have struggled with drug addiction for years," said the character.
Reported speech:

b) "My family always supports me," she stated firmly.
Reported speech:

c) "I will never give up on my dreams," he declared confidently.
Reported speech:

Answers:
a) The character said (that) he had struggled with drug addiction for years.
b) She stated (that) her family always supported her.
c) He confidently said (that) he would never give up on his dreams.

Reported Offers

An offer is when someone says they would do something for someone else.

Reported offers are used when you are not the person making the offer. Instead, you are communicating somebody else's offer. To form the reported offer, follow this structure:

subject + offered + to-infinitive (affirmative)
He offered to go with me to the hospital.

subject + offered + not + to-infinitive (negative)
He offered not to intervene in the fight.

Read the following examples:

Direct Offer	Reported Offer
"I will help you to brainstorm ideas for your project," David said.	David offered to help me to brainstorm ideas for my project.
"I can show you how to use the online research database," the librarian said.	The librarian offered to show me how to use the online research database.
"Do you want a drink, Ana? I can buy you one," Susan said.	Susan offered to buy Ana a drink.

1. In communities, imagine you are reporters in a war zone, and have talked to soldiers who have seen many kind acts. Tell people about these acts of generosity in your reports following the example. Write your reports in your notebook.

A villager talks to a group of soldiers, including Sergeant Martínez, through a translator. The villager says, "Soldiers are here to help. If you need anything, don't be shy to ask!"

You report later: "The villager offered to help the soldiers with anything they needed."

2. In community, change the direct offers into indirect offers.

a) "I will let you rest soon," the sergeant said.

b) "I will share my water with you," my friend María said.

c) "Let's negotiate a truce," the enemy said.

d) "I will show you the way to the refugee camp," a kind local villager said.

e) "I will treat your wound immediately," the doctor said.

f) "We will not support the invader," the army declared.

g) "We can stop the attack," the spokesperson of the rebel group said.

h) "Do you want some food and water?" a man displaced by the conflict said.

i) "If you have any further questions, we speak again," my interviewee said.

j) "We will not introduce new taxes," the government said.

Iara Wanda Gjinovich, ESTADO DE MÉXICO

Identifying the Problem

Iara Wanda Gjinovich, ESTADO DE MÉXICO

1. Individually, from what you already know and what you have discovered in previous sessions, complete the following table in your notebook:

The First World War

From _____ to _____

Participating Blocks	Causes	Consequences

a) In communities, share your tables. Compare your ideas and complete them together based on your answers.
b) Keep your table to consult it in the following stages.

2. In communities, analyze the following text and then answer the questions in your notebook.

Iara Wanda Gjinovich, ESTADO DE MÉXICO

The First World War ended in 1918 and left Europe devastated socially and economically. As a consequence of this conflict, new countries formed, and empires such as the Ottoman, the Austro-Hungarian, and the German II Reich disappeared. In addition, the League of Nations was created, a precursor of the UN.

Although the Entente Powers were considered the victors while the Central Powers were the defeated, European societies were the most affected. They faced a tremendous economic and political crisis with high unemployment and food shortages. Germany, considered the main responsible for the conflict, was severely punished and imposed a large debt.

All this instability and crisis, coupled with the growth of nationalism, especially in Germany and Italy, indicated that the problems had not finished with the end of the First World War or Great War, but that they only subsided for a couple of decades to give way to an even greater conflict: the Second World War.

1. In assembly, make a work plan:
   a) Define the purpose of the Historical Newscast.
   b) Make a list of activities and organize them to be carried out.
   c) Assign responsibilities.
   d) Some people will write the news; others will be the interviewees. You can also propose other roles and functions.
   e) Set delivery times.
   f) Decide how and when you will present the Historical Newscast.
   g) Calculate the time needed to do rehearsals before the presentation.

2. Review the plan and decide if it is necessary to add, remove, or change elements.

Iara Wanda Gjinovich, ESTADO DE MÉXICO

Following Through

Once the activities are organized, it is time to work. Meet in communities according to the work plan and do what each one of you must do. Remember to ask for the help of your teacher if you need it.

a) Decide on the structure: You can divide your Historical Newscast into sections such as Main News, Special Reports, Interviews, or others. Consider the chronology of the events.
b) Write content based on what you researched in the previous stages; write the texts and scripts for each part of the newscast. Make sure to use clear and engaging language for the audience.
c) Visual and set design: Consider what you need to present the newscast. Use some furniture and design a logo.
d) Practice: Rehearse the presentation of the Historical Newscast.
e) Decide if you will present your program to attendees simultaneously, that means live, or if you will make a pre-recording and play it later.

Recording the Experience

1. Prepare to present the Historical Newscast to the community. You can invite members of your choice.

2. It is time to inform! Present the Historical Newscast about the Second World War to your school community members. Prepare what you need, considering whether you will do it live or recorded.

3. Before you start, explain the context of the topic and answer any questions. Collect feedback from viewers; this will help you improve on future projects.

4. After presenting your newscast, it is time to dialogue with the community. To do this, organize a round table in which you can talk about questions such as:
   a) Has the community ever faced a conflict that harmed or changed their lives? How did they solve it? What did they learn from it?
   b) What can be done to promote peace and non-violence?
   c) What actions can be taken as a community to support groups or people in conflict situations?

Appreciating My Path

Now that the newscast is over and the Second World War is over too, look at your progress.

1. Individually, write a page based on what you learned in this project. Then, read it in assembly and reflect together on the following:
   a) Who are the most affected by armed conflicts, and why?
   b) Are beliefs and processes that triggered the Second World War still in force? If so, what problems persist?
   c) What is the importance of creating peaceful societies that respect the rights of all human beings?
   d) Can such societies be created from the school, the community, or the family? How?

Iara Wanda Gjinovich, ESTADO DE MÉXICO

2. In assembly, discuss what other historical events you would like to share with the school community. Past events often have consequences in the present, and it is very important to reflect on them to build more peaceful societies that respect human rights.

3. Reach agreements to spread the importance of a culture of peace and mutual understanding. Some strategies could be:
   a) Reading circles based on stories, poems, novels, manifestos, or other texts in which the central theme is peace, non-violence, and healthy coexistence.
   b) Popular theater and performances with representations whose central theme is the construction of peace, and that promote a healthy coexistence.
   c) Murals in the streets to express your opinion about violence and wars.

4. Finally, write in your notebooks the assembly agreements reached by the community to move towards a more peaceful world and avoid armed conflicts.

Action Proposals

Now that you have identified the right to information, the challenges that internet users face due to infodemic, and what infocracy represents for democracy, it is necessary that, collectively, you develop strategies to detect fake news to avoid sharing them. Once you have your proposals, you will present them in a promotion campaign.

1. In communities, reflect and write ideas on how to combat the problem of infodemic in your classroom community. You can use the following questions as guidelines:
   a) How can you distinguish a trustworthy source from one that isn't?
   b) What can you identify in an information piece to discard alteration, manipulation, or distortions to confuse society?
   c) How can you verify whether the information is trustworthy or not?
   d) What would you suggest to an adult to prevent or avoid infocracy when using social media?

2. Define the necessary actions to carry out a campaign to promote taking care of the information people consume.

3. In assembly, and with the help of your teacher, share the ideas you worked on and agree on a plan to create and implement a promotion campaign in your community. Consider these questions:
   a) What do you want to achieve with your campaign?
   b) What messages will you spread?
   c) How will you spread the messages?
   d) Which resources will you use (infographics, posters, podcasts, meetings, or, if possible, social media)?
   e) When will you carry out your campaign? Define the dates.
